Development of a Graduate Attribute for a Bachelor's Programme in Psychology

The figure below presents a hypothetical psychology undergraduate programme in which the development of a graduate attribute in relation to intercultural competence has been mapped; this represents a 'learning line', in which the Intended International Learning Outcomes (IILOs) are strategically planned within a . In Year 1, students are introduced to the competences in the course Social and Cross-Cultural Psychology I. Afterwards, the competences are practiced in the course Dialogue and Group Skills. The competences are incrementally embedded in the curriculum: during the programme, students graduate from exposure to theory to practical application and then to mastery, at which point the competences are eventually assessed. A graduate attribute of importance in this hypothetical curriculum might be: 'to be able to communicate effectively in intercultural contexts'.
